

To whom it may concern:

As a citizen of Indiana in these great United States of America, I urge the FCC to discard any proposal and resist any effort that would preempt Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections in a manner that lessens its effectiveness. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has immensely improved my quality time at home by eliminating unwanted telephone solicitation which is an extreme aggravation to me. I used to receive approximately 8 to 10 calls per week. Now I honestly can't recall when I was last disturbed by one of these completely irritating interruptions. This matter is of utmost importance to me as I enjoy spending my time in my home unmolested by the telemarketer trying to sell, solicit and otherwise cajole me into supporting or buying something that simply does not interest me.

Please help insure my domestic tranquility and promote the general welfare of all Indiana citizens by rejecting any regulation that adversely affects Indiana's Telephone Privacy law.
